VETS IN CAMP.

Over One Hundred Thousand Strangers in Indianapolis.

The City Beautifully Decorated From One End to the Other.

Camp Wilder Formally Dedicated by Gen. Harrison—The President Makes Two Addresses of Welcome to His Old Comrades—Camp Fire Burning.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 5.—The arrival of veterans to attend the twenty-seventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was enormously augmented Monday. Trains were rolling into the central station every half hour unloading their thousands, and for the most part with as little delay as could be counted upon. But four times there were blockades, however, none of any serious delay until Monday evening, when five trains were blocked at the suburb of Brightwood, four miles from the center of the city, and for the most part the large crowds had to walk, as the street car facilities were not sufficient to receive the demand.

It is estimated that 100,000 people reached the city Monday, and about one-fifth of that number of strangers had already come in Saturday and Sunday. Monday's special trains numbered fifty, and of these there came from Chicago 1,200, 1,500 and 1,500 passengers. Large numbers came in from Cincinnati, St. Louis and the western cities and the far east.

The stranger found the city beautifully decorated from one end to the other, the scenes of the business streets being enlivened by flags, shields and festoons in colors.

The central points of interest aside from the state house, where the forty-five Grand Army departments are located, and the hotels, the lobbies of which are packed with the decorations of Camp Wilder and the reception of the officers and delegates of the encampment. Camp Wilder is one of the many places for which the city is famous, and there, Monday afternoon, a short dedicatory programme was carried out in the presence of an immense audience. There was music, vocal and instrumental, addresses by Commander Ketcham, Gen. John T. Wilder, commander-in-chief Weissert and ex-President Harrison.

Gen. Harrison said among other things: "I thank you, comrades. My friends, I have felt during the last two months as I related by newspaper that I was in some of the camps. The Indianapolis papers brought to the front day to day the story of the profound work that was being done by some of the veterans to prepare for the reception at Indianapolis of the A. R. I was not here to share the labor, but I am here today to do honor to them who have borne the brunt of this great war."

The ex-president then recalled the time when the camp was a fair ground, and the location of the various buildings, the speed track, the scene of peaceful contests, and again when it was converted into a place for bloody contests—when it was known as Camp Sherman. He then spoke of the unity of the patriotic sentiments of the men of that generation, soldiers of Indiana, Ohio or Illinois, or of the United States.

"My comrades," he said, "these tents are as pitched many days hence more than those in which you dwell here in 1861." Inside these tents, which were built for the purpose that remains to them to be the shrine of God's blessing to God's people. Tomlinson hall, the most spacious in the city, comfortably accommodating 5,000 people, was packed Monday night, the occasion being apparently the reception to the officers and delegates of the encampment. For this event 5,000 invitations were sent out, and there were many that more people than the hall, with a great mass in front. The features of this reception were chorus and orchestral music, addresses and dancing. The address was made by Commander-in-Chief Weissert and ex-President Harrison, the latter speaking for the citizens.

While these events were occurring at the hall the streets were thronged with veterans and visitors. About the monument, where the great statue of the nation was given, it was almost impossible to make way through the throng. The illumination was from 5,000 incandescent lights, arranged in beautiful devices of anchor, liberty bell, shields and festoons.

The campfires, given in the four largest churches of the city, were attended by great crowds, and these, with the events enumerated, filled in the measure of the day. Gossip in regard to the encampment's action on pensions and the place of the next meeting has not developed enough to make any clear predictions. Lincoln, Nebraska, is the only place so far mentioned for the encampment.

As to the coming commander-in-chief, it is believed that Ohio is not giving Hurst the cordial support that warrants success. John G. B. Adams, of Massachusetts, was mentioned with more enthusiasm than Hurst. In regard to the latter, Folger, of Ohio, said that Lincoln, of Washington, was preferable. The race remains between Adams and Hurst and Lincoln, with the probabilities favoring the former.

Tuesday will be given over to the parade in which it is estimated there will be 50,000 grand army men. Ohio alone claims they will have 15,000. If that is true the aggregate will be nearer 75,000 than 50,000, as Indiana will have 15,000 in line; Illinois, 10,000; Michigan, 5,000, and Iowa, 5,000. Tuesday night there will be a great display of fireworks, and on Wednesday the fireworks of the encampment will begin.

The citizens executive board anticipates a great number of arrivals Tuesday. It had provided for 35,000 free quarters and at 9 o'clock Monday afternoon the largest of the barracks accommodating 15,000 people was full and provisions were being made for the overflow. It is estimated that the crowd will be the greatest yet at an encampment, as the indications Monday night were that the arrivals from that point until Tuesday will be as large as they were Monday.

Monday an electric car on the East End line, Cincinnati, broke a brake while going down the steep Broadway incline, and became unmanageable. As it was six people were seriously hurt, one probably fatally.
